

Working well together

Everyone brings different skills and experience to their work. That’s great news! A strong team includes people who have different experiences and are good at different things. Each team member can use their skills and the things they know to make the team’s work as good as possible.

A good leader is someone who helps everyone find the place on the team where they work best.

Meet Lori

Lori manages a team of 3 employees at a daycare. She thinks about the skills her employees have:

- Saskia is great with people. She likes talking and leading discussions.
- Giancarlo is great at working independently. He pays a lot of attention to detail.
- Parisa is very creative. She always has great new ideas.

Lori wants her employees to work together to redecorate the playroom. She writes a list of all the tasks she’ll need her team to complete. In the table below, help Lori decide which team member would be best for each task. Then write why you chose that person for each task.

Task	Which team member would be best?	Why did you choose that team member?
Come up with a new design for the playroom
Call the hardware store to ask questions and order all the materials
Make sure all the posters are hung straight and all the tables are level
